Tamsin Wimhurst

The David Parr House an extraordinary Cambridge home

David Parr was an 'artistic decorator' who worked for some of our best known Victorian designers of the day such as William Morris and George Bodley. He decorated church's and palaces for those who could afford such decoration but in his spare time he come home and decorated his humble terrace house in the same style. Lived in by his granddaughter until a few years ago its interior remained a wondrous hidden secret. Now it will be saved, restored and opened up to the public so that many more can enjoy its unique atmosphere.

St Andrews Church Hall, Oakington.
Meeting starts at 7:30pm (until approx 9:15pm)
